Introduction

About 10 years ago when I first purchased the set of disks comprising the 1881 census I had the idea of trying to see where many coalminers and glassworkers moved following the failure of both industries in Nailsea.

As I prepared data I noticed several families who had obviously moved away from Nailsea and returned and moved away later.

Unfortunately for various reasons I did not complete my survey nor draw any conclusions from the data extracted.

Recently I was asked for more data to be made available on our web site and I remembered that which follows.

I have found it convenient to make the data available in two “volumes” Book One covers those born in Nailsea who moved a fair distance, while Book Two covers those who remained in the South West.

The various stages through which this data has gone before being presented here means that there is a greater chance of there being some errors. If the reader finds a name that interests them they should refer to another source.
